New Website Empowers Cook County Residents to Live Tobacco-Free

Lung cancer is the leading cause of cancer deaths in Illinois, and cigarette smoking is the direct cause of about 85% of all lung cancers. Each year, thousands of lives are lost due to tobacco-related diseases, with communities of color and low-income populations facing the highest burden. The tobacco industry continues to target youth and vulnerable groups with flavored products, menthol cigarettes, and aggressive marketing, making it even harder for individuals to quit.

To address this ongoing public health issue, Cook County Department of Public Health has launched UnfriendTobacco.com, a new website designed to educate and empower residents. The website provides critical information on the dangers of tobacco and vaping, as well as tools and resources to help individuals quit and support tobacco-free communities.

Tobacco-related illnesses disproportionately impact certain populations due to targeted advertising, reduced access to healthcare, and systemic inequalities. Many tobacco-related deaths and diseases are preventable, yet millions of Americans continue to suffer from addiction and its devastating effects. By providing accessible education and cessation resources, UnfriendTobacco.com aims to break these cycles and support individuals in leading healthier lives.

Quitting tobacco and vaping can be challenging, but it is possible with the right support. Many free resources are available to help people quit, including counseling, nicotine replacement therapy, and community-based programs. Education and awareness also play a crucial role in preventing tobacco use among youth and advocating for policies that promote clean air and healthier environments.

Every person deserves a chance at a healthier future, free from tobacco's harms. Visit UnfriendTobacco.com to learn more and take action today.
